a calmer second thought, resolves to seek his remady at the hands of the law.

We venture to assert that such a state of affairs could not exist here if the conductors of the ress understood their vocation and discharged duties properly. There was no harm in desoribing the details of the ceremony which made Miss Bartlett Madame de Oviedo. Great weddings are made the subject of comment by the newspapers of London and Paris, where they are certainly quite as particular about the proprieties as we are. Every one knows how elaborately the recent wedding of one of the childs was described, and more or less attention, according to the position of the parties, is paid by the European press generally to fashionable weddings. There is no harm in it; it is not displeasing to the parties, and is enjoyed by the public, who like to read of shows and grand ceremonies, and all the bravery of rich apparel, fine jewels and precious gems, in which the great ones of the land make sacriace to Hymen. Such events happen sometimes in our republic, which is rapidly outgrowing the simplicity which was once wedded to it. And when they occur it is fit and proper to describe them in a gentlemanly and agreeable way. The parties do not object, and the public likes the variety which the fashionable intelligence gives to its favorite journal. But it so happens that there are a certain number of hangers-on, blackguards and loafers, who manage to smuggle into the papers, here and elsewhere, offensive personalitice like those concerning the Bartlett-Oviedo affair, and degrade the press by making it a vehicle for assaults upon private character. The truth is, that as the press should be the mirror of the times, it has an undoubted right to describe interesting social events, but no right to distort facts or impute motives to any of the actors in those events. When this is done, the law may be properly resorted to as the only remedy, and Mr. Bartlett is certainly right in appealing to that remedy. But a civil suit is not the thing. Let him go to the Grand Jury. In the present temper of the public. caused by some recent scurrilous publications. the indictment of the libeller would be almost a matter of certainty. He could then be tried in the Sessions, where, we doubt not, he would receive his deserts at the hands of the City Judge or the Recorder, and spend a few months in the penitentiary, employed in some honest labor, which could not fail to exert the most salutary effect on his diseased mind, and afford a healthy example to fellows of the same school who disgrace our periodical and news paper literature.

Murder at Hudson City. THE RESULT OF A GAMBLING APPAIR ARREST OF THE MURDERER.

Yesterday afternoon an affray occurred between party of tunnel men at a shanty boarding house in Hud son City, near shaft No. 6, which resulted in the murde of a man named James Lebert, by the boarding hous keeper, John O'Donnell, who stabbed him with a carving knite, which penetrated the eye and entered the brain, causing death in about twenty minutes. It appears that O'Tonnell, the deceased, Lehert, and two others, were engaged playing cards during the afternoon for liquor; they had a quart of lemon sods and a quart of liquor, which was drank amongst the party. About four o'clock an old man, a stranger, came into the shanty and made inquiry after some person; he remained there a white, and finally Mrs. O'Donnell ordered him out, and not obeying, she and her bugbend ejected him; Lehert, the deceased, took of erce at this, and taking the man's part, attacked O'Donnel, and tore his shirt; a tussle ensued, when some of the boarders put Lehert out of doors to prevent further difficulty; deceased then procured two stones, burst in the door and attacked O'Donnell, when another scottle ensued, during which the latter was seen to have a large carving infectively, deceased then procured two stones, burst in the door and attacked O'Donnell, when another scottle ensued, during which the latter was seen to have a large carving krifte in his hand; at this time Mrs. O'Donnell was between the two, when one of the men present saw O'Donnell make thrust with it; deceased run out of the door, followed by O'Donnel, and fell to the ground, having received a lash in the right eye, the blade of the knife lasting penetrated two inches into the brain, carsing ocard about twenty minutes afterwards. Constable James Donnelly, hearing of the occurrence, went to the house, and after a short search succeeded in hinding O'Donnell secreted under the floor. He was accordingly arrested and committed to fail to await the realit of the Ceremer's investigation. The prisoner states that he was natacked in his own house, and only acted in self defence. Coroner Mortis proceeded to Hidden City last evening, and commenced an investigation, when the doct with O'Donnel, and it appears that herefore they had been good friends. O'Donnell is represented as being a temperate man, and the witnesses testified that he drank hothing stronger than cordial or lemon syrup vesterday, while the deceased was quite intoxicated. One of the witnesses testified that the latter received a cut on his head, produced apparently by a stone. The investigation was adjourned until to day, as one of the witnesses who was present at the time, was too much intoxicated to give his evidence. Deceased was a single man, about thirty-three years of ago, and it is not known that he has any friends in this country.

A S A BEAUTIFIER OF THE COMPLEXION, AND AS A clarifier of the buman cuticle, GOURAUD'S Italian medicated scap is universally admitted to stand beyond the reach of rivairy. It is notable that among the hundreds of thousands who have used if during the past twenty years in the case of rina, pimples, freekles, eruptions, chaps, chafes, tender fissh, morphew, and all skin deformities, not a solitary complaint has ever been made; on the contrary, the numberless voluntary testimonishs which have been presented to its inventor, teem with landations of its medical and regenerating virtues. It also prevents the formation of wrinkles, and has also the power of removing them when formed. It is however the very best shaving compound ever invented.
